Administrative history
The Desjardins Canal Company was incorporated on January 30, 1826 by Peter (Pierre) Desjardins of Dundas. Stocks sold quickly and a management structure was established but construction of the canal was halted with the death of Desjardins in September 1827. Construction slowly resumed and in 1833 Alexis Fidele Begue arrived from France to represent the interests of the Desjardins heirs. Begue managed to revive interest in the canal and after raising the necessary funds, the canal was completed and officially opened on August 16, 1837. The canal brought prosperity to Dundas as a centre for the manufacturing and distribution of goods. Unfortunately, the arrival of the Great Western Railway in 1854 ushered in the decline of the canal. In 1869, the Town of Dundas seized the canal to settle the mortgage and applied to the government to cancel town and canal debts. By the 1870s canal revenues were dropping and the Town agreed to close the canal. The Desjardins Canal company went into liquidation in 1876 and became part of Dominion Public Works until 1877 when it was transferred to the Town of Dundas.
